The Student–Teacher Relationship

From culture to culture, the student–teacher relationship can be very different. In many cultures, the relationship is formal. Students always use titles such as Professor or Doctor (46) w _____ addressing a teacher. They never use first names. Interaction is very polite. For (47) e _____, when a student asks a teacher about a test, the question might be something like this, “Excuse me, please, Dr. Veramani. Could you tell me (48) whet _____ we will have a test in the near future?”

In the U.S. and Canada, the student – teacher relationship is often less (49) _____. Some teachers allow students to call them by first name, for example, John, (50) i _____ of Mr. Nelson or Professor Nelson or Dr. Nelson. So, instead of something like, “Dr. Nelson, could you please tell me when our team paper is due? I would like to know when I should hand it (51) _____,” you might hear this, “Hey, John. I can’t remember the due date on our next paper. When do you want it?”

(52) _____ (informal) is most common at the university level in the United States. The university level is also where cooperation among students and faculty is perhaps the strongest. Students work with faculty members on projects and papers or in labs and clinics. The success of the work depends on the (53) _____ (collaborate) of the group. With the emphasis (54) _____ the group, stronger, less formal, and more (55) _____ (person) relationships tend to develop.

Part IV Reading Comprehension (35 marks)

Read the following passages. Each passage is followed by several questions. Respond to the questions using information from the passage. Remember to write the answers on the answer sheet.

Section A (5 marks)

Questions 56—60 are based on the following passage.

Quebec Winter Carnival

In 2005, the modern Quebec Winter Carnival turned 50 years old. It had become the leading carnival in Canada in just 50 years and the largest winter festival in the world. Each year the carnival attracts visitors and media from all over the world. Starting at the end of January, it runs till middle of February.

The modern Quebec Winter Carnival began at 1955. But French-Canadian citizens have celebrated every winter since Quebec became a French colony in 1608. Life was hard in those days, and winters were so cold that people sometimes died. The carnival was started as a way to entertain people living in Quebec City and give them hope during the winter months. Eventually it became a yearly event, entertaining not only the people of Quebec but visitors as well.

At the center of the modern festival is a mush-loved snowman mascot (吉祥物) called Bonhomme. Dressed in the traditional red hat and red belt of the French Canadians, he visits all the traditional and modern events. These include sports and cultural activities such as dogsled races, ice-fishing competitions, and international snow sculpture event, cross-country skiing, and even car racing on ice. These is also a “snow bath” event, held in temperatures as cold as  $-34^{\circ}\text{C}$ ! Visitors can visit Bonhomme’s winter home—an ice palace built from more than 6,000 blocks of ice, each weighing around 34 kilograms.

Quebec city is often called the snow capital of the world. The winters can still be as cold as they once were, but the fun of the Winter Carnival always brings warmth to the city.

Read the passage, and then tell whether the following statements are true (T) or false (F).

56. The best title for the passage is Warm Festival in the Snow City. ( )
57. According to the passage, why the carnival was held at first was to attract tourists and media from around the world. ( )
58. The nickname of Quebec city is the snow capital of the world. ( )
59. The snow bath event was held in temperatures as low as  $-4^{\circ}\text{C}$ . ( )
60. Bonhomme’s winter home is a wooden palace built from more than 6,000 pieces of wood, each of which weighs as heavy as 34 kilograms. ( )

Section B (10 marks)

Questions 61–65 are based on the following passage.

Earth’s Largest Animals

(61) _____ It depends on where you look. On land, the largest animals are African elephants. What could possibly be larger than an elephant? Well, the blue whale is! Not only is it the largest sea animal, it is even bigger than an African elephant!

(62) _____ African elephants can be about 3.5 meters tall at the shoulder and can weigh almost 5.5 metric tons. In comparison, blue whales can be about 30 meters long and weighs about 135 metric tons. That’s a big difference! In fact, blue whales are the largest of all animals that have ever lived on Earth.

(63) _____ It means that the females of both animals produce milk to feed their babies. The body temperature of elephants and whales remains about the same no matter where they are. All mammals are covered by hair at some point in their lives, although neither

African elephants nor blue whales have very much hair. As adults, they just have a few bristles here and there.

(64) _____ Both can hear low-pitched sounds that humans cannot hear. Although whales have very good sight, they have no sense of smell. Elephants, on the other hand, have poor eyesight and a good sense of smell.

(65) _____ For example, people have hunted the whales for food and oil. Elephants have been trained to do work and are prized for their ivory tusks. Today, agreements, or laws, protect these giants so that they can continue to live in their natural habitat without facing extinction.

Fill in each blank with one of the following statements, two of which are useless. Put the letters A, B, C, D, E, F and G in each blank according to the theme development.

A. People have used both the blue whale and the African elephant as resources.

B. Have you wondered what the largest animals on Earth are?

C. Both African elephants and blue whales are mammals.

D. While African elephants are the largest land animals on Earth, they are tiny in comparison to blue whales.

E. Mammals also breathe air through lungs.

F. Both elephants and whales have a good sense of hearing.

G. Mammals are also warm-blooded.

Section C (10 marks)

Questions 66—70 are based on the following passage.

Space

Two important years in the history of space travel were 1969 and 2001. On the 20th of July 1969, the American astronaut Neil Armstrong became the first man to walk on the moon. The words he spoke as he stepped from his spacecraft will always be remembered in history, “That’s one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind! ”

In 2001, a 60-year-old American man called Dennis Tito also made history. He didn’t go to the moon, but he did become the world’s first space tourist. He paid $20 million to visit the International Space Station. During his vacation, he saw Earth from space and experienced being weightless. “My eight days there were the best days of my life,” he said.

There could be thousands of space tourists like Dennis Tito in the future. People are thinking of building space hotels where tourists can stay and enjoy the pleasures of being in space. Imagine looking down at Earth from a comfortable chair. Need some exercise? Handstand is easy in zero gravity. And you can forget table manners in space—just throw a cookie across the room and watch it float slowly into someone’s mouth!

The space tourists of the future will certainly have fun. But space vacations won’t be cheap. One company thinks tickets will cost around $200,000. So if you want to follow Dennis Tito, you should start saving now. Or maybe you could try getting a job in a space hotel.

Answer the following questions according to the passage.

66. What is the main idea of the passage?
67. What does the underlined phrase “made history” in the second paragraph mean?
68. What is the probable cost of space vacation?
69. According to the passage, what kind of exercise is difficult on the earth but easy in space?

70. Which words that Neil Armstrong said as he stepped onto the moon was remembered in history?

Section D (10 marks)

Questions 71–75 are based on the following passage.

Coast to Coast

Nick Campbell sat at the side of the road and wondered what to do next. He looked at the second-hand Harley Davidson he'd bought from a back-street garage back home in Miami at the beginning of his trip six weeks before.

For years he had dreamt of crossing the United States from east to west by motorbike and he'd finally decided that it was now or never. He'd given up his job, sold his car and set off for the journey of his dreams. He'd been lucky, or so he thought, to find this old Harley Davidson and had bought it for a very reasonable price—it had cost him just $600. But five kilometers from Atlanta, he had run out of luck. The motorbike had broken down.

He pushed the bike into town and found a garage. The young mechanic told him to leave the bike overnight and come back the next day. The following morning, to his surprise, the man asked if the bike was for sale. "Certainly not," he replied, paid his bill and hit the road.

When he got to Kansas the old machine ran out of steam again. This time Nick thought about selling it and buying something more reliable, but decided to carry on. When the bike was going well, he loved it.

However, in Denver, Colorado the bike broke down yet again so he decided to take it to a garage and offer it for sale. The mechanic told him to come back in the morning.

The next day, to his amazement, the man offered him $2,000. Realizing the man must be soft in the head, but clearly not short of money, Nick asked for $3,000. The man agreed and they signed the papers. Then the mechanic started laughing. In fact it was several minutes before he could speak and when he could he said, "That's the worst deal you'll ever make, boy."

Read the passage carefully and then complete each blank in the summary in a maximum of three words from the passage.

Nick Campbell had a dream of driving a motorbike to cross the U.S.A. from (71) _____, so he bought himself a (72) _____ Harley Davidson, which cost him just $600. But the motorbike (73) _____ after 5 km from Atlanta. When he had it repaired, he was (74) _____ that the mechanic wanted to buy it. He refused and carried on his journey. (75) _____, the motorbike broke down again, so he decided to sell it to the mechanic for $3,000 and buy a more reliable one. After they signed the contract, the mechanic laughed for several minutes and told Nick that it was the worst deal Nick would ever make.
